THE MYTH AND PROPAGANDA OF BLACK BUYING POWER

This latest book is the culmination of more than a decade of Dr. Ball's seminal research into the origins of 'buying power' as a concept and its specific application to African-America. The book involves also explorations into propaganda, the politics of media and journalism, and Black economic and political histories.

BLACK RADICALISM AND HISTORIOGRAPHY

Dr. Ball has been at the forefront for years in the production of intellectualism, journalism, media, and debate around Black radical traditions and their depiction in popular commercial media and scholarship. The figures and related politics he covers include Malcolm X, Kwame Ture/Stokely Carmichael, Dr. King, Assata Shakur and George Jackson.

'I MIX WHAT I LIKE!' EMANCIPATORY JOURNALISM AND MEDIA

'I Mix What I Like!' is borrowed in phrase and philosophy from the work of South African/Azanian freedom fighter Steve Biko whose own journalism encouraging revolutionary politics was written under the title 'I Write What I Like!' Dr. Ball's work combines this tradition with that of Emancipatory Journalism.
